OXENWOOD HIRES GUILLAUME BAIKAS FOR FRENCH INVESTMENT

Oxenwood Real Estate, the UK and European real estate investment management firm, has hired Guillaume Baikas to support the development of Oxenwood's investment activity in Europe.

Guillaume will focus on investing in France. He has more than 15 years' experience in the European real estate sector, having been involved as a lead investor in the sourcing, execution and management of private equity investments at Maya Capital, at Nomura's merchant banking division and at Duke Street, the private equity group.

Guillaume obtained an MSc in Finance from ESCP Business School and an MSc in Finance from Toulouse School of Economics.

His appointment reflects Oxenwood's ambitious growth plans and follows four senior appointments earlier this year of Peter Land to focus on German investment, Jamie Bird to join UK investment, Chris Lochhead as head of finance and Tim Bradshaw to lead proprietary construction and development projects.

Jeremy Bishop, co-founder of Oxenwood, said: "Guillaume is an experienced and talented individual who will play a key role in the investment programme in France for our clients. Our capital base has expanded substantially this year and he will be supporting our team in deploying in core-plus, value-add and opportunistic situations, including development".
